This not being sufficient to satisfy the doctor as to the cause of death, he applied for permission to hold a post mortem examination, which having been granted it was soon found that the weapon had pierced the heart, and that death must have been instantaneous. On inquiry, the police found that the murdered man was named Futaro Kuhachiro, a fireman belonging to the Yokohama Fire Brigade, and well known to the foreign residents here; he being the son Rokuposke. From further particulars obtained, apparently the murder had been planned, for we hear that about 3 p.m. a messenger went to the fire brigade compound and stated that a man named Chilkane wished futare Kuhachire to go to his house, and he, having no suspicion of any kind, went at ence. About 4 p.m. another man came to the brigade premises and said some one ought to go to Kuhashiro's assistance as he expooted there would be trouble. Unfortunately however, no one attended to this request and about an hour and a half afterwards the man was brought to the police station dead. Detectives soon obtained information of the murderer, who had fied. He proved to be a kind of head man of a lot of gamblers well known to the police. The cause of the crime was a woman, the wife of Kuhachiro. She, it appears, formerly lived with a member of this gambling club, but left him; and was married to the unfortunate feeling, but the murderer, strange to say, is not the man with whom she formerly lived, but the bead man of the chique to which he belonged. A TRIP TO ACHEEN.

Colonel Frederic Brine, R.E., contributes to the Straits Times the following results of his observations in Penang and Acheen, under date of the 4th March :-

In 48 hours from leaving the roads of Singapore in the B. L steamer Pemba, Capt. Potts, we were at anchor off the jetty at Panang. Beyoud noticing the Tanjong Pager Docks, which appeared to be doing a flourishing business, admiring the new harbour, and passing off Malacca in 15 hours from starting, and Rachado light house in 19 hours. I have nothing to record except that on the 23rd the Pemba found hersell good many of the brigade turned out also, and in a perfect amphitheatre of water spouts acwithin ten minutes from the first stroke of the companied by rain. This called forth the edutents of the building through the door. When an American family of 3 on board. She was also first opened the godown appeared one mass of a good dressmaker and ladies hair dresser, all flame, and as there was a strong wind blowing When will Europeans in the East have European men and maid servants? It is only a matter of expense, and the horses and women would decidedly benefit. My 5 fellow passengers at once (1 p.m. 23rd February) landed to visit the everlasting Waterfall, and at 4 the Captain and rowed ashere, he to ride his bicycle, and with my servant to go to the Hotel de l'Europe. During my four days' stay Penang, waiting for the Kongses steamer to return to Acheen, we all (9) at the hotel, felt the absonce of seats on the Esplanade and Jetty : that our drives and clothes were spoilt by the dusty roads, -and we should have been very grate. ful if the rice Reading Room in the Town Hall had been opened for a couple of hours on Sunday. One contleman who sat in the back seats of the English Church complained bitterly of the rate, and I noticed that the two Iront seats were vulgarly covered a red colour. When will people give up everlastingly striving for front seats? should also mention that I was very sorry to see the Union Jack flying over the fort in charge of the police, which was no longer a saluting Battery, and to hear the title of Lieut.-Governor had been reduced to "Resident Councillor." This of course is foolishly done to suit the Colonial Secretary. On leaving the hotel, I was also sorry that I had not had time to visit the Prye River Docks and to dine or breakfast with the Lieut. Governor; they were both across the barbour in Province Wellesley-and I had known the latter, Major McNair, before. After waiting an hour for Mr. Tolson, one of the directors of the Prye Docks, and De Longe & Co., who own five steamers and are the contractors till 1884 for supplying the Dutch Army and Navy in the kingdom of Achsen with cattle, &co., we at 6 on the evening of the 27th February sailed in the Kongese, Capt. arena of practical politics dates from 1857, when he unsuccessfully contested Southwark. After other vain attempts at Parliamentary honours he was finally returned for Brighton in 1865.

The manner in which he first introduced himself to the electors of Brighton is characteristic of his courageous spirit and his cheerful indifference to his affliction. He travelled down to Brighton one afternoon alone and unattended, and when he reached his hotel he heard there was a political meeting in the town that evening. He asked the waiter after dinner to accompany him thither, and started forth under the man's guidance. He found the meeting occupied in selecting candidates for the approaching election, and without a moment's hesitation, he rose and said that he did not wish to disturb the evening, but begged to appounce that he intended to offer himself as a candidate, This bold address naturally took every one by surprise, but his candidature was adopted with acclamation, and he subsequently represented Brighton for nearly ten years.

Among Mr. Fawcett's Brighton constituents was a fussy little tradesman whose assiduous attentions became rather a misance. This person was very proud of being seen walking about with the member, and was pos des boites. Mr. Fawcett was one night accustomed to waylay him whenever he got dining with a small party of political friends, a chance. Mr. Fawcett good-naturedly sub- including the junior member for Birmingham mitted to the infliction, but he could not resist, on one occasion, perpetrating a practical joke. He was proceeding along the King's-road with a friend, when his ubiquitous admirer came up to him as usual. Mr. Fawcett turned to his friend and said answer, "you gentlemen make the laws, and gravely: "I know Mr. X. likes to walk as they compel me to close my establishment slowly along the Parade, so we must at eleven o'clock, I have no alternative but to moderate our pace." With this remark he ask you to go."-Truth. immediately started off at five miles an bour, which soon caused his constituent to break into a trot. Mr. Fawcett went on talking as though be were quite unconscious that his pace was unusual, and the upshot was

> SOME CAUSES OF BOILER COR-ROSION.

Herr Keil names two causes of the internal and external corresion of boiler plates, which, he observes, have hitherto been but little studied. These are the chemical composition of the metal composing the plates and the influence of the variations of temperature. A highly carburetted plate, approaching nearly to steel, will become oxidised less readily than, one containing very little carbon. On the other hand, phosphorus, sulphur, manganese, silicon, and magnesium favour oxidation, and consequently corrosion; and, as these subwould have provented him from attaining elicit from him a remark which sounds most regard to the second cause, certain portions of the boiler are, more than others, subject Mr. Fawcett frequently visits Salisbury, to rapid changes of temperature. On placing Although Mr. Fawcett is close upon fifty wsheet of white paper on the table at night in a room lighted with ordinary gas, and looking through the small hole with one eye, both eyes being open, he will see on the paper a disc of a beautiful cobalt blue colour, syldently the complementary of the rellow light of the gas. On examining the sky in the same way in the morning, there will be seen especially if the weather is dull and hazy, as it has been of late, a disc of a primrose yellow colour, the complementary of the blue sky, which, although invisible, is still making its impression on the sensitive retina. Later on in the day, between five and six o'clock. when the weather is murky, the disc has a well-marked pink colour, the atmosphere being evidently tinged with dark green, These several results I have witnessed from day to day for the last fortnight and ther have been verified by others to whom I have shown them. But when the sky is very blue and clear, there is seen, for obvious reasons, a blue disc only. In the above experiments there is the curious anomaly of having, one eye impressed with the exciting colour, the Argos
